BLUEFIELD COLLEGE ANNOUNCES NEW HERITAGE SOCIETY MEMBERS

Bluefield College would like to welcome the newest members to the Heritage Society. These generous individuals have decided to become part of this esteemed group for a variety of reasons. Some have joined because they would like to honor the memory of a loved one, some because of the great fellowship and family-like atmosphere they found at Bluefield College, and others because they feel this is a touching experience and can change the lives of many.

One of the newest members, Ethel Lamanca, at 103 years young, is one of our eldest Rams fans. Ethel became a member of the BCHS to honor the life of her late husband, John Lamanca. Although she did not attend Bluefield College, she has a special place in her heart for Bluefield. Lamanca's late husband, John, was a 1927 graduate of the College. He participated in three sports which led him to become part of the Bluefield College Sports Hall of Fame. Ethel says he loved the College because of his opportunities in athletics, the beautiful campus, and the focus on faith and fellowship. Ethel would like to encourage anyone who has lost a loved one that attended Bluefield College to contact the Director of Planned Giving, Hal Keene, to find out which option may be best for you.

Eddie Rader, a 2003 graduate of Bluefield College, finds that giving back to the College is truly an enlightening experience. While attending Bluefield, he earned his degree in organizational management. Rader is a long-time supporter of Rams athletics and rarely misses a home football game. His support continues as he has added a bequest in his will to support Bluefield College. Eddie loves to hear the testimonials of students whose lives have changed due to the support of donors like him. Eddie challenges all

William Merle Howell of Tazewell, VA, established a scholarship in honor of his late wife, Nancy K. Howell, who graduated from Bluefield College in 1961. Howell hopes that with the creation of the scholarship it will not only help to keep her memory alive but will change the lives of current and future students. Merle knows Nancy would have wanted this scholarship to impact as many students as possible. Creating a planned gift, in honor of your loved one, is a wonderful way to honor their legacy.

As many know, Bluefield College alumni are scattered far and wide. Linda K. Warren, who has resided in Bakersfield, CA since graduating in 1959, still feels a love for the College. Her love has now been transformed into a planned gift. Ms. Warren, like many others, encourages alums to find out more about including Bluefield College in their estate plan.

as possible. This has been shown through the various planned gifts to the College. Caudill hopes others will follow in his footsteps and help make a difference in the lives of future students who attend Bluefield College.

Dr. Don Caudill, former professor at Bluefield College, has graciously endowed a gift to develop the Caudill School of Business. Caudill taught for a number of years and believes this will have a great impact on many students. Caudill hopes this gift can help change lives and make a difference in those students. Every year his love for Bluefield College continues to grow and he wants to give back in as many ways

Dennis Harper is a 1971 graduate and a current member of Bluefield College's National Advisory Council. Harper has a passion to help each and every student who attends the College. Dennis feels it is a blessing to give back to his alma mater. Mr. Harper challenges his fellow classmates to become a member of the Heritage Society and to give back as well.

All new members of the Heritage Society have different stories about their time on campus, how they're associated with Bluefield College, and where they are today. They all have one thing in common and that is that they are Rams strong. With the help of these members and many others, the lives of current and future students are being affected in the best way possible. The members encourage and invite you to become a member of the Heritage Society, too, and give back to Bluefield College.
